2011 Christmas Auction a Huge Success!

This year's dinner and auction was the best yet! We broke records with over 1,000 guests attending, up from 800 last year! A brand new sound crew came up with an innovative system that allowed everyone in the room to hear well without it being too loud for any of the tables. Our expanded bank with 20+ computers and 12 credit card machines kept the check out process smooth. If you attended, thank you so much for coming. You helped put Right to Life in a great strategic position for next year, where we will do more training and equipping of pro-life ambassadors for Christ.

Modern Warfare 3 Unashamedly Preaches Moral Relativism to Impressionable Teens

by Josh Brahm

Some of you may be surprised that I'm a pretty big Call of Duty fan. I wouldn't recommend it for everyone, but it's certainly one of the best first-person shooter games out there, and I enjoy playing with my friends. (Who are almost all a lot better than I am.)

Call of Duty is not without its controversies though, most infamously an optional level in Modern Warfare 2 where you play an undercover agent whose gained the trust of a terrorist group, and is forced to take part in a terrorist attack in an airport.

While that bothered me, I'm actually more concerned about the message being preached in the Modern Warfare 3 single-player campaign, which is hardcore moral relativism.

Do Emotional Appeals = Logical Fallacies?

Description: Trent Horn, Director of Youth Outreach with Project Defending Life joins the show via phone to discuss whether emotionally appealing arguments are automatically fallacious. Josh and Trent have both recently been countered by debaters who immediately object whenever they make an argument that pulls on peoples heartstrings. Certainly some appeals to emotion are fallacious, but are all of them? What are common fallacious appeals to emotion that pro-lifers and pro-choicers make while debating abortion?

Quote of the Month

"When I think of excellent pro-life thinkers, I think of Josh Brahm. This man knows how to articulate the pro-life position in a way that compels you to act. His podcast is a must for anyone seeking a timely and insightful analysis of current pro-life issues. He is a model for other pro-lifers by being winsome and gracious on this very sensitive subject. Most importantly, I'm confident his work will save the lives of many unborn children."
